Let the Games begin...

STUDENTS AT Junipero Serra School (kindergarten through eighth-grade), participated in the school's annual Mini-Olympics Day, running, jumping and hurdling through a variety of events. Following in the tradition of the International Olympic Games' Parade of Nations, students, led by torch-bearer Andrew Riccairdi (above, center), paraded onto the grounds to start the day. Joseph Quaglia (left) gave it his all during the 40-yard dash. Kindergartener Courtney Porter meanwhile (top photo), retains her balance after a standing broad jump attempt, with teacher Carol Harris marking her jump. Carmel Recreation Director Beth Kastrup was the guest speaker and students were able to partake of foods of the "countries" represented at the all-day event. (Holly McFarland photos.)

Halftime accolade

Dear Editor:

Before I sound off on this page of our Pine Cone, and so you'll know where I'm coming from, perhaps it's best to identify myself.

Briefly stated: I'm in the middle of my fourth year of residency here, I'm a home owner, an ex-broadcaster, a former Marine, a registered voter, and I think a rather tough audience.

Since April 8, 1986, I've positioned myself on the sidelines, objectively I hope, and with more than casual eyes, have watched the job performance of our mayor Clint Eastwood.

I approve — and I applaud loudly and proudly. Why this halftime accolade?

First and foremost, this man is conversant with and dedicated to the affairs of our city. He tackles its problems, he does his homework, and more importantly, he listens.

The words "lip service" are not part of his vocabulary, however the words "community service" are. When duty calls, our mayor, with little fanfare, appears at the proper place at just the right time. This is not in anyway to infer that he is a do-gooder. No way. But, friends and neighbors, you can rest assured that he is a good-doer. He does things.

I'll bet that most of us Carmel folk, if we could, would erect a giant billboard at the intersection of Ocean and Junipero avenues with these words in bold print:

"Thank you, thank you, thank you, Clint for Mission Ranch. Mission accomplished and the situation is well in hand — in the capable and concerned hands of our mayor."

No wonder the Carmel Heritage group recently doffed their hats and bonnets to the mayor. A meaningful kudo.

So now it's halftime for Clint as the second stage of the Eastwood administration comes upon us. I fondly recall the statement contained in Clint's election brochure. In restrospect I feel it was these words that prompted many of us to support his candidacy. This is what Clint Eastwood said:

"This is my home — this is where I've chosen to live. It is where my friends are, it is where my heart is."

Heartfelt thanks

I wish to express my heartfelt thanks to the friends, acquaintances and organizations for the cards, phone calls, flowers (enough to fill half of Carmel), and telegrams from all over the world wishing me a speedy recovery from my recent accident.

I wish to thank the priests at the Carmel Basilica for their daily visits and all my dear friends and neighbors for the soups and food brought to my home. Of course, words cannot convey my gratitude for the care given me by my only daughter, LaVonne, the spirit-lifting calls from my grandchildren, and for my dear nurse who came from Santa Cruz to care for me night and day. I thank the Lord daily for the strength that's helping me to recover and I want everyone to know how truly blessed I feel I am.

A new routine

Dear Editor:

Carmel knows how to spring a new routine. Example: a library annex at the Crocker Bank building. We can do it again with an all-weather swimming pool at Carmel Middle School as part of a community center with an assembly hall for wide-ranging uses. A stellar group is already at work on this concept. They are checking out both school and public need in one stroke.

The site is ideal. The school grounds and the adjacent Val Verde Drive area of about 45 acres have the last remaining vacant land central to the greater Carmel Area which consists of Carmel Valley, Carmel, Pebble Beach and the Big Sur Coast. Rio Road will be extended behind the school to hook up with the Carmel Valley Road at Rancho Canada for a neat traffic loop.

What happens on the school grounds should fit with that on the adjacent Val Verde Drive area of about 45 acres in private ownership. Because service center businesses for the local population and public facilities are the highest and best use of the acreage for the public good, the Carmel Valley Master plan should be revised to cut out single family homes as an alternative. Housing subdivisions are excessive upzoning for this unusually important acreage. The key is a "specific site plan" for the Val Verde acreage, one that ties in with the work under review for the school next door.

Are we like the editor who sorts the wheat from the chaff and then prints the chaff? I think not. The big benefits are level land, central location, bus line, better balance in business types, less trans-peninsula traffic, easy road access, and travel and cost convenience for an older age population.

Growing minority

Dear Editor:

Do Carmel residents want more art galleries, jewelry stores, T-shirt shops (by whatever names they go under), ice cream shops, junky gift shops, or any increase in stores dedicated solely to the tourists?

They said NO before, how many times do they have to repeat it? Don't they want to protect Ocean Avenue from further disintegration, and prevent further spread of commercial enterprise? Do Carmel residents, to get back their streets for their own parking, want to pay for a garage (one or many) built primarily for the tourists and the 2,000 plus employees that come into town daily? Garages that few residents will use, but will be asked to pay for?

You bet there's been a vocal minority trying to get a mesmerized majority who, however unwittingly, voted for all the stuff the residents don't want, to take a good look at what's going on, before it's too late. Wisdom for many began with the eyeopeners provided by the recent public hearings on the "new" General Plan. Though our preamble, then and now, begins with clearly sublimating business in our town to residential concern, the objectives of that "new" plan do not. In Carmel, the position of the resident is clear and any "plan" for him or his city must give to him his due.

That minority is growing fast. It is growing as fast as the blinded are learning to see.

GUEST EDITORIAL

By Howard C. Nieman, Jr.

At the crossroads

CARMEL'S EXISTENCE is at a crossroads. The city's historic defense against growth and tourism, our relative isolation from major urban areas, no longer works. We are less than 90 minutes away from San Jose and the Bay Area, and the entire Monterey Peninsula has evolved into a major tourist and development area.

Ironically, at this crucial time, this city's administration wants to reduce the role of government in Carmel and provide for greater private sector enterprise.

The basic questions we must ask ourselves are: (1) What role should government play in a small and fragile community such as Carmel, and (2) how should the competing interests of property owners, businesses, tourists and residents be resolved? These are not new issues either; they have simply never been addressed and settled.

Carmel residents now have a vehicle and means to debate these issues: the revised Carmel General Plan. The proposed revisions raise important policy questions, and even seemingly innocent changes in wording in the General Plan can open the door to significant changes in our land use policies for years to come.

How these complex issues are resolved is what we should focus on in coming weeks. In other words, we must ensure that the revised General Plan reflects our attitudes.

The General Plan Review Committee, composed of five members appointed by Mayor Clint Eastwood in May 1986, is solely responsible for the proposed revisions. When asked by The Carmel Pine Cone how the committee supports their sweeping changes to the existing General Plan, they said the Eastwood election "mandate" provided all the justification needed. I disagree. In fact, a major change in land use policy was not even an election issue.

The administration should recognize that election results are poor indicators of public opinion after the fact. More importantly, you can't take public support for granted: it must be earned on each issue every time.

Remember the widespread public controversy over the environmental consequences of the McFarland seawall, development of the Bennett property and sale of the Flanders/Martin Road properties? In each case, the administration's initial position was not supported by Carmel residents, including by members of that 72 percent election majority. Carmel residents are issue oriented, and the key issue is what is good for the people of Carmel.

Carmel is also a very small community. We don't have the luxury of hiding unwanted growth or bad projects "across town." Nor can we avoid the impacts from tourism unless the city acts on our behalf. Carmel residents and visitors see and feel the results of our land use decisions and policies every day, often without realizing the direct effect these decisions have on our daily lives.

Our village character is inseparable from its physical environment: what you see is what you have. Would Carmel still be Carmel with larger commercial buildings, sidewalks in residential districts, or perhaps with streetlights and traffic signals? Of course not. It's the vestige of its rustic past that gives this town its strength and character.

In all fairness, I have not heard anyone within the administration propose to eliminate the trees or encourage sidewalks, streetlights, or traffic signals in Carmel. But the administration does favor allowing private developers and others more control in building their projects.

My concerns are: How can we hold developers accountable for actions whch impact the community without government intervention? And can we trust developers to act in our best interests given their record in Carmel? Not if history is any guide.

An unfortunate consequence of the city's self-imposed water moratorium has been that we have not yet seen or felt the impacts from the numerous developments approved by this administration. But public awareness is growing, however.

The feeling expressed by some to this burgeoning public awareness is disappointing. "It's the same old people speaking out against the results of the election, and not on the issues," these people repeatedly say.

Sure, some of the people speaking out against the sweeping changes in the proposed General Plan amendments were active in previous administrations: but is that reason alone to dismiss their ideas? Certainly not!

Likewise, many Eastwood supporters have favored a weakening or change in direction of the existing General Plan from the day it was adopted in 1984. Does that automatically mean their revisions are right? No, it does not. The standard should be what is in Carmel's best interest as a community of people and ideas, for today and for tomorrow.

Even the debate over whose views matter is itself a serious problem. We must learn to ignore personalities and instead focus on the merit of what is said. Vigorous public debate on issues is always constructive; sound decisions can only be made when all ideas are honestly and sincerely considered.

Ever since Carmel's founding only a small number of residents have ever cared enough about Carmel's future to fight for it. But numbers don't matter; again, it's what people say and feel that counts.

Today, our isolationist defense must be replaced by sound land use planning or the pressures on Carmel to meet the demands of increased commercialization and tourism will win out over our needs as residents. Carmel needs to adapt its land use politics to these changed circumstances, or be changed based upon the demands of others. And our public officials must also adapt to these new circumstances.

My conclusion is that while Carmel can be the type of community we want, it won't be unless we all participate. If we fail in this responsibility, we have no one to blame but ourselves when Carmel is no longer the small, coastal village we all searched for, found and then surrendered.

Council sets guidelines for parking garage

By DAVID LELAND

FREE PARKING in Carmel may soon be a thing of the past if the Carmel City Council's plans for an underground parking lot at the north end of Sunset Center are realized.

In a special meeting Monday, the council set guidelines for interested contractors to follow in submitting bids; these rules will formally be presented to the council at its June 2 meeting.

Those procedures include: a private party for a lease agreement instead of using public funds, a top level used for city purposes and a lease of no more than 55 years.

'I've long been in favor of doing something with parking at Sunset Center,' Councilman James Wright said. 'I've also long been in favor of the community knowing what's being proposed.'

After the guidelines were set, there was some concern by Councilman Bob Evans that creativity by the architects applying would be stifled with the list of stipulations.

"The position of the city ought to allow presentation of maximum creativity," he said. "I hope we haven't put them in a straitjacket."

But Mayor Clint Eastwood disagreed.

"I think the comments we made today do not hinder or saddle anyone with a particular design," he said.

A deadline of Aug. 7 was set for submitting bids. It was also decided that financial plans will be sealed.

Also at the meeting, there was concern whether the city could support a pay-for-parking endeavor.

"It would be helpful if we had some data to see how it compares in the real world," said Councilman Jim Wright, suggesting a study of Monterey parking lots.

But Evans countered, saying that the public would become accustomed to the practice of pay parking.

"A city that's been used to free parking will initially resist paying for parking," he said. "(But) the days of free parking are over."

There is a daily deficit of about 500 parking spaces in Carmel, according to city consultant Denise Duffy in her report to the city.

Prior to the council meeting, there had been some concern by Wright and several private citizens that the process for accepting proposals for a garage was not keeping the public duly informed.

"I've long been in favor of doing something with parking at Sunset Center," Wright said at the meeting. "I've also long been in favor of the community knowing what's being proposed."

Prior to this week's meeting, Monterey-based architectural firm EMC Planning Group Inc. had submitted a formal proposal, while three other parties had expressed interest in building a multi-level underground garage with the city.

There had been no public discussion regarding any of these plans. However, one of the guidelines adopted by the council calls for adequate public hearings on the parking garage.

During the meeting, Michael Groves, EMC president, told the council that he was taking his bid back and would resubmit it with the others.

Initially, Monday's city council meeting had been scheduled to hear a formal proposal by EMC, with the council expected to take action. But that topic had been changed instead to construct guidelines.

Later that same afternoon, architect Hewitt Clark, who designed plans for a five-level garage for EMC, told the Carmel Cultural Council in its meeting that, "Today was supposed to be approval day."

ALSO AT Monday's meeting, the council formally approved wording for a contract with the California Coastal Conservancy for a $200,000 grant for Phase II of the Carmel Beach Restoration.

At its May 5 meeting, the council had directed Greg D'Ambrosio, director of administrative services, to change the contract so the conservancy could not make plans for the beach that were not in accordance with the city's wants.

The contract now indicates to the conservancy several deed restrictions between Eighth Avenue and Martin Way and states that if the conservancy breachs the contract, Carmel will refund the entire grant.

"I have discussed these issues with the Coastal Conservancy," said D'Ambrosio in his report to the council. "They have tentatively accepted the language subject to seeing it in writing."

Before the council voted (4-1, with Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo dissenting), Laiolo expressed her dissatisfaction with the conservancy.

"I am in disagreement in applying for funds in view of the fact that it is such a small part of the investment," said Laiolo, referring to the conservancy's $200,000 grant to be applied to the total cost of $750,000 for beach restoration.

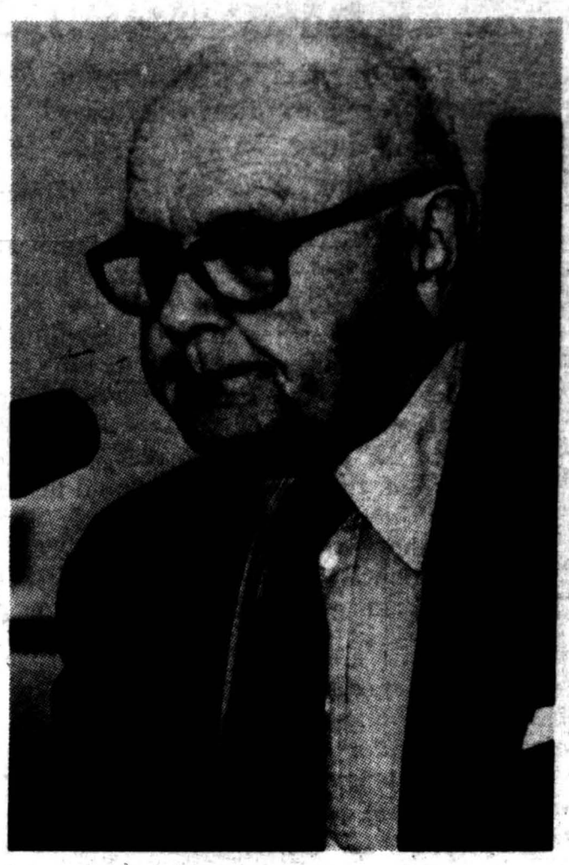
"The Coastal Conservancy is supplying a small part and have the final say in the project."

But Wright disagreed with Laiolo.

"I don't see that this gives them control over the project whatsoever," he said.

In addition to other business, the council also adopted a second reading of a water ordinance that will release those projects held up by the water moratorium.

The ordinance gains water for additional projects by utilizing stringent conservation measures in private and commercial use.



COUNCILMAN BOB Evans believes that even though there has never been a parking garage that has required fees in Carmel, the idea is a good one and the citizens will get used to it. (Holly McFarland photo.)

At the same time the council approved the ordinance, it also instructed city staff to prepare amendments to the law.

The ordinance was drafted prior to the city's settlement with the water district, said Brian Roseth, staff planner. And thus, was outdated even before its completion.

"The ordinance does not reflect benefits gained in the settlement," Roseth said.

He added that there were a wide range of issues which the councilmembers wanted to change and he was not sure when that task will be completed.

Planners to 'test' Sunset theater, parking garage plans

By NANCY HILLS

A PARKING garage at the north field of Sunset Center and a theater at the east end will to try to pass the General Plan "taste test" next week.

The Carmel Planning Commission is scheduled for a double dose when it reviews compatibility with the general plan of those two issues at 3 p.m. Wednesday, May 27 in Carmel City Council Chambers.

No city project or ordinance can conflict with the general plan, the city's "blueprint." If the commission finds those uses inconsistent with the document's policies and directions, it could stop two major proposed projects — a multi-level parking garage at the north field and the 1,500-seat Stanton Theater on the east end.

The unpaved north field is currently used for haphazard parking by employees, residents and tourists.

However, the planning commission can only make a recommendation, which is then sent to the city council. The council will make the final decision.

The two projects themselves are not under consideration, only the concept of using those areas of the city for those purposes.

The concept of a parking lot at the north end of Sunset Center and the concept of a theater at the east end will be reviewed as separate items.

If the planning commission decides that those uses are compatible with the city's policies, the projects that are now under development can proceed with their designs and firming up their proposals, which will be submitted later for approval.

A parking facility at Sunset Center has long been discussed in Carmel and the city council voted Monday on guidelines for development of such a project.

The city had already received one formal proposal, from EMC Plannng Group, Inc., for a five-level 534-space parking garage, while three other groups have shown an interest in submitting designs.

The city council at its special May 18 meeting put an Aug. 7 deadline date for submissions. (See related story this issue.)

Carmel residents supported a facility at Sunset Center in both the 1982 and 1985 city-conducted surveys; the north end dirt parking lot is mentioned in the general plan as a possible site for off-street parking development.

One policy in the current plan mentions that any parking solution should "recognize that Carmel is a limited resource and limited in size...it is not practical to provide sufficient parking off congested streets."

The same policy states that it is "desirable" to remove parking from the streets and from public view "where practical" and "in a scale appropriate to Carmel."

Other policies state that the city should "investigate possible locations in the commercial and R-4 area, including but not limited to the north field of Sunset Center."

The plan also states that the "benefit to and impact on residents" be the "primary factors" when developing parking solutions.

The proposed revisions to the general plan identify Sunset Center as a possible site for off-street parking.

Objections to a major facility at Sunset have centered around the fact that it is in the R-1 residential district, and providing more parking will only increase traffic in Carmel.

There also have been objections to the size of the proposed plans, but that will not be considered at the May 27 meeting.

•

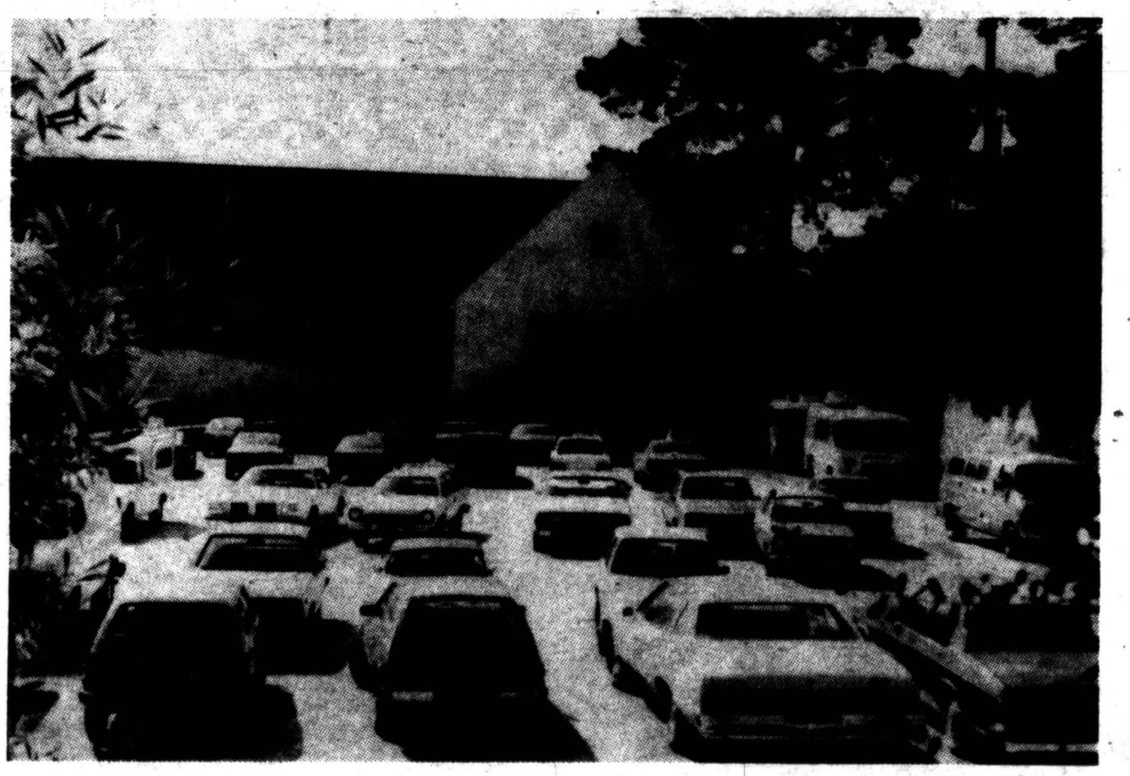
THE PLANNING commission's general plan review of a enlarged theater at the east end of Sunset Center is sparked chiefly by a revival of a plan first proposed in 1968.

The plan included a 1,500-seat theater designed by the late Robert Stanton, a well-known Carmel architect. The facility would connect with the present Sunset Center buildings.

Burney Threadgill, a member of Friends of Sunset Center, said that the project's plans are in the development stage and what the entire project would consist of is still unknown.

It will be financed, he said, by private funds raised by proponents of the performing arts theater.

They do not want to proceed much further without finding out if the city approves of the concept, he said.



A PARKING facility at the north field of Sunset Center will be one of the items the Carmel Planning Commission will review for conformity to the city's general plan at its meeting Wednesday, May 27. The commission will also review the general plan's direction on a theater at the east end of Sunset Center.

The general plan is silent in regard to a theater at Sunset Center as well as the entire concept. Arguments for or against will probably be made on the basis of the impact of a theater in that area and on Carmel's reputation as an arts center.

In August, the city council approved $10,000 to help finance a $23,000 feasibility report on the project. One finding in the report states that 72 percent of Carmel residents favor a new theater in the city.

Planners to consider senior housing complex

By NANCY HILLS

SENIOR CITIZEN housing will come before the Carmel Planning Commission again.

The planning commission will consider amendments to a specific plan which was approved last year for the Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue project senior citizen housing project. The commission could also incorporate a design review in their deliberations.

The amendments would increase the number of units from 15 to 24 and include a 37-space underground public parking garage.

After the commission makes its recommendation, the amendments should be considered June 2 by the city council, which makes the final decision.

The council will have to conduct a first and second reading a month apart, as in an ordinance change, because the specific plan for the project is written into the code, explained Planning Director Diane White.

It will also have to go back to the California Coastal Commission, which had approved a permit for the original plan.

That plan, approved last year, was for 15 650-square foot one-bedroom apartments with private patios or decks and did not include a public garage below.

The new plan is for three 572-square foot one-bedrooms and 21 500-square foot studio apartments without private decks or patios. It does have a community room with kitchen facilities.

The increased number of units will change the density on the 20,000 square foot site from 33 units per acre to 52 and site coverage from 31 to 48 percent.

Once a city and Monterey County Housing Authority project, it has been taken up by the Carmel Foundation, which plans to use private funds to pay for the approximately $1.2 million housing. The city owns the land.

The combination one- and two-story buildings will provide housing for Carmel's low-income senior citizens.

Before the blueprints were even completed, the project had a three-year waiting list, according to Carmel Foundation Executive Director John Frietas.

Architect Robert Jacoubowsky, who completely redesigned the project, said it now has four separate buildings made of different materials and with varying roof shapes.

Materials used for the exterior include shingles, stucco and board and batten and the roofing is asphalt shingles. The least visible are made of stucco, he added.

A four-car parking area for the housing residents is provided as well as a slice of public park on the corner of Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue.

The underground garage did not have an impact on the design, Jacoubowsky said, but two trees will have to be removed and landscaping in the complex will be a bit different than originally planned. Most of the trees on the lot, he said, are along the edge and won't be affected.

Because of the structure underneath the ground, landscaping will be done with planters and pots.

Critics of the garage have objected to its being in the R-1 zone and underneath the senior housing. It will be too noisy and create congestion on an already busy corner, which is across the street from the post office.

The area is now being used as a dirt parking lot.

CHANGES TO the specific plan for the senior citizen housing project on the corner of Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue, across from the Carmel Post Office, as depicted in this architect's rendition, will be reviewed by the Carmel Planning Commission at its Wednesday, May 27 meeting. The changes include increasing the number of units from 15 to 24 and adding a 37-space underground public parking garage below the complex.

Controversial 'Krone' training is not so threatening

By DAVID LELAND

WATCHING PARTAKERS laugh and joke before a Charlie Krone seminar seems more like a high school reunion than a two-day class on changing the thought process through dialogue and dogma.

Krone's intent is to streamline people into a "systematic" approach to problem solving — getting them to think about how they think.

Familiarity abounds with the 90 or so followers who meet every six weeks with Krone at Sunset Cultural Center in Carmel in an effort to increase their skills. Last week marked seminar No. 43.

"Charlie changes the subject each time," says Pamela Mang, 43, a business consultant attending her 35th session. "But they all deal with improving the corporation."

Mang utilizes her training at Pacific Bell and "various governmental agencies."

Recently, Pac Bell made national news when it was discovered that, over the next few years, all 67,000 of its employees will be "Kroned" at an estimated $60 million annual expense to the company.

It should be noted that even though businesses receive the lion's share of publicity regarding the Kroning process, the concept will work for anyone.

Among the attendees at last week's session were consultants, writers and housewives trying to think more efficiently.

"Businesses are just a collection of people," says Mang. "If it didn't work for people, it wouldn't work for business."

For Krone, 58, the idea of helping people at his seminars is a give-and-take affair. He sees himself as more of an equal than a teacher.

"At the same point I'm trying to teach, I'm learning," says Krone, who offers the course free of charge for long-time followers.

Nationwide, Krone and his associates Jim Clark and Mike Assum — co-founders in the Kroning process — are assisted by about 200 independent consultants.

"My interest is that it is open ended. To me that's the universal value," says Krone, who is held up by some followers as an intellectual leader. "I definitely don't look at myself as a guru."

•

BUT WHAT is this "new" style of thought that is sweeping much of the country's business community?

First off, Krone says the process is not new at all. The only innovative aspect of his teaching is how it is being applied to modern man.

Krone attributes a biologist by the name of von Bertalanffy with coming up with the idea that all things are interrelated, which is the basis for his work.

Krone, the son of a philosopher who worked as an engineer and consultant during the 1970s at Proctor & Gamble, has only clarified that process.

"This type of thinking is what you call systems thinking," he says. "It's thinking about how we create interconnections in our thoughts."

The idea is that if people think more systematically they will be more creative and make fewer mistakes.

Moreover, it is expected that if members of a company agree on certain fundamental values, they will operate more efficiently.

With this in mind, Kronees must develop a new lexicon. They use such words as alignment for agreement; internal resource for employee and end-state vision for goal.

Much of the teaching is an attempt to take the randomness out of a person's thought processes. Classes are taught with a Socratic-style dialogue as well as breaking into smaller groups for more intense work.

Krone, an imposing sight with his 6-foot 4-inch frame, sits at a table in front of the room, running the show with a benevolent but firm hand as he solicits answers.

"It's simply not acting thoughtlessly when we do something complex," says Stuart Wells, 40, business management professor at San Jose State University describing the program. "It takes the consideration of all the people who will be involved in what I am doing."

Taking his theory of interconnections a step further, Krone tells his students, as consultants, they must relay a complete message to their clients.

An example.

The base person in the company, Krone says, is principally involved with the equipment process, while the management is concerned with the assets the equipment is bringing in.

"Businesses have the same problems anything else does," says Krone, who has been perfecting his work for more than 35 years. "What this does is to provide training in connection with any number of problems."

Last week's training was called Structural Intelligence, an idea which Krone carried out at Proctor & Gamble in the late 1960s. It is still in use today.

"Structural intelligence brings understanding to instinct and intuition," says Krone.

In order to better understand Krone theory, it must be understood that there are "six essentials of organizational health."

These are: expansion, freedom, identity, concentration, order and interaction.

Krone spends much of the time, as do his followers, in perfecting the thought process. Last week's lesson was no different.

"In order for structural intelligence to provide us a consciously managable capability," says Krone in his 13-page handout on structural intelligence, "we must mentally construct what it is we want to think about."

Krone knows most of the people gathered in the room on a first-name basis. He keeps the dialogue moving at all times.

"It's a session of stimulating your thinking in terms of the business world," says Don Decker, 51, one of the consultants working with Pac Bell.

Not only does the Krone process increase a company's productivity, but it is also

Library renovation plans are making progress

By DAVID LELAND

RENOVATION PLANS for the Harrison Memorial Library Annex inched ahead last week when the library board heard details of the $450,000 project slated for the vacant Crocker Bank building at Sixth and Mission.

While there are still some issues to be worked out, it appears the project's architects Gretchen Flesher and Bill Foster will work in conjunction with Monterey-based firm Hall, Goodhue, Haisley & Barker in providing services.

Earlier in the month, the board had requested that Flesher and Foster, who have worked with the library on several projects but are no longer employeed by HGHB, be contracted for the annex services.

It is essential that Flesher and Foster work with a larger agency because their insurance will not provide sufficient liability coverage with Carmel.

No official action can be taken on the renovation plans with the architect until the Carmel City Council executes its $1.75 million lease agreement with Wells Fargo Bank.

By June 1, the agreement should be completed, according to Doug Schmitz, city administrator.

And, while the board approved the contract in theory at its last meeting, board members John Kennedy and Jack Billwiller were scheduled to meet further with architect Don Goodhue to discuss how additional rates will be figured.

Under the terms presented at the meeting by Goodhue, a fee of $62,475, which would cover basic services and a $1 million liability insurance, were given.

The major assumption, Goodhue said, is that mechanical, electrical and structural systems will not require major changes. He added that the figures given should be within "10 to 15 percent" accurate.

Under the proposal, 11 meetings are included which the architects will attend. If more are needed, they would be billed on a time and expense basis.

Billwiller said it may be better if the fee is adjusted to cover all meetings, instead of being billed at a later date.

Billwiller added that by the time the June 2 city council meeting is completed, the board will have reached an agreement with the arcitect and work may begin.

Once completed, the new annex will house administrative offices, children's services, technical servies and possibly, a local history room at its Sixth and Mission site.

Goodhue, in his proposal, said the entire process would take between nine and 11 months to complete.

He made the following breakdown: two months for presentaion of design; one month for review; two months for technical work and drawings and four months for the actual reconstruction.

Not included in the proposal by HGHB were landscape architect services and design for interior furnishings.

George 'Woody' Wood retires after 22 years

By DAVID LELAND

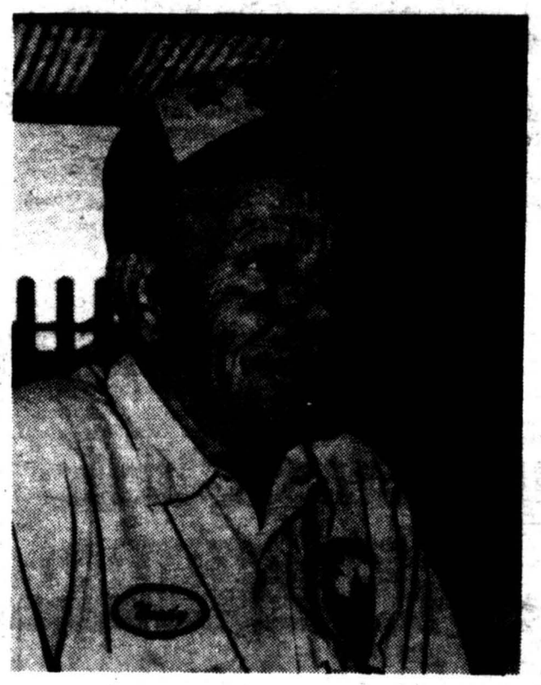
A SIGHT to residents familiar as the azure-blue Carmel Bay will vanish next month when George "Woody" Wood retires from the Carmel Public Works Department after more than 22 years of service.

For most of that time, Wood has worked keeping the beach clean and pristine for the people of Carmel, a job that he's going to miss when he moves to Eugene, Ore.

"Yeah, I'm going to miss the ocean and the beach," said Wood, 65, a man of few words who plans to do plenty of fishing upon retirement. "You get to know a lot of people and their dogs."

Friends of Wood (sans dogs) are invited to a going-away party given by the public works staff from 5 to 8 p.m. Saturday, May 30, in the American Legion Hall, located on Dolores Street between Seventh and Eighth avenues.

The party will be potluck and those wishing to attend should call Lois Jones at the public works department at 624-3543.



AFTER 22 years of tending Carmel beaches for the city's public works department, George "Woody" Wood, will retire at the end of May. (Mac McDonald photo.)

Upon leaving Carmel, Wood and his wife Berna will move to Oregon where they plan to buy a mobile home and relax. But Wood will no doubt retain fond memories of Carmel.

"The public works have been nice people to work for," said Wood, his craggy features breaking into a shy smile.

The feeling is mutual.

"He's the hardest working guy," said Jones, public works administrative assistant, who has worked with Wood for 20 years. "Anything he is asked to do he does it. He really takes pride in getting things done right."

Fellow worker Bill Askew, who has been with public works for 40 years, agreed.

"He has always been dependable and faithful," he said. "He was always there when you needed him. He took pride in his job all the time he was there."

For Wood, coming to work in Carmel must have been the next closest thing to heaven after some of the jobs he worked along the way here.

•

BORN IN Idaho, Wood and his family moved to the peninsula in 1929, where he enrolled in Monterey High School.

But after a short time studying, he was forced to take a leave of absence during the Depression years and work to help his family meet expenses.

So, at 16, he signed up with the Civilian Conservation Corps and began his public service career by working doing maintenance on peninsula parks and beaches.

He earned a whopping $58 each month, of which $50 went to his mother. He worked for the CCC one year.

After that he enlisted his services with the Del Mar Cannery on famous Cannery Row, pulling the cans out of the cooker with a pair of tongs.

"Man, you sweated," Wood said, as he remembered the almost unbearable heat he endured. "Boy, that was hot."

And, in June of 1965, he signed on with the city of Carmel for $403 a month.

Shortly after beginning his job, it was suggested that Wood help out with the workers at the beach on a temporary basis.

"I started out at the beach for a little while," he said. "Look how long it's been."

Planning commission asks for moratorium on second stories

By NANCY HILLS

A MORATORIUM on second stories in Carmel could start as soon as June 2.

The Carmel Planning Commission recommended that the city council approve an 45-day urgency ordinance on new second stories in downtown Carmel. The council will consider the issue at its June 2 meeting.

The commission voted for the moratorium, referring to public input it heard May 22 against second stories when Ted and Bob Leidig's application for adding apartments above their buildings on the corner of Dolores Street and Sixth Avenue was reviewed. The application was continuded until June 10.

The commission itself had also been struggling with the question of second stories, some expressing concern about downtown streets becoming "concrete canyons."

The Leidigs have another application for apartments over the Court of the Fountains on Mission Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues and one application approved for apartments over the Dansk building on the corner of Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street.

Apartments over the Goold building, on Sixth Avenue and San Carlos Street, are currently under construction.

The ordinance, the commission felt, would give time for a review of the current ordinance on second-story additions and changes to be made in the general plan. Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo, at the May 5 council meeting, suggested that a moratorium be reviewed.

The commissioners briefly debated the issue at their May 13 meeting, with Commissioner Olof Dahlstrand holding out against the ordinance.

Dahlstrand eventually voted for the recommendation, agreeing with Commissioner Bruce Roberts that an emphasis should be put on the 45-day limit. With the exception of Chairman Ken White, all the other commissioners stated the same condition.

White said he did not think the review could be conducted that quickly.

Almost all commission members expressed concern about moratoriums dragging on.

Planners approve Toots Lagoon park entrance

By NANCY HILLS

DESIGNS FOR Piccadilly Park's newest additions, a door and window into Toots Lagoon restaurant, got the nod from the Carmel Planning Commission May 13.

The commission approved the architect's design for a French-paned window looking out on to entrance of the park and an entrance into the restaurant on the southern interior garden wall.

Commission Chairman Ken White told the audience that the commission was only approving the design, which had nothing to do with the permit to allow the additions.

The city council, White said, approved that May 4, subject to design approval.

Access to the doorway is from the trail within the park, over a short boardwalk the restaurant will build.

Entrance to the restaurant will be allowed during the daytime, but the park will be locked at night and the doorway used then as an emergency exit.

Toots Lagoon needs the additional emergency exit to meet building codes when its bar is moved from its present location to the restaurant's front room. The planning commission approval of the remodel was based on council approval of the doorway into the park for an emergency exit.

In exchange for the window and doorway into the park, Toots Lagoon owner Eddie Johnson agreed to allow the public use of his bathrooms.

•

IN TWO other applications the planning commission decided that R-1 motel expansions are not allowed.

The commission unanimously voted against the conversion of Sunset House's manager unit into a guest room. That would have increased the number of rental units from three to four. Sunset House, on Camino Real Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues, is a three-room motel with one manager's unit.

"The use permit was granted for three units," Commissioner Fred Keeble said. "How can we increase the number of units without changing the permit?"

Commissioner Bruce Roberts agreed it was " an increase in use for that motel," and Commissioner Carla Ramsey said she believed "it was against the Housing Element of the general plan."

Attorney Myron Etienne, representing Sunset House owners, and Staff Planner Brian Roseth debated the provisions of a 1968 initiative that prohibits growth of motels in the residential district.

Also in dispute was whether Sunset House had three or four guest rooms when the voters approved the initiative. According to planning department records, the motel had three, but according to Etienne's information, four.

The initiative states that an R-1 motel can retain the same number of units it had when the law was approved. Etienne also stated that the law did not apply to his client's situation since it had less than 10 units and was not undergoing any remodeling.

But the commission disagreed and voted against the request.

In another R-1 motel application, Edgemere Motel's application to add a solarium was turned down by the commissioners. Though the addition would not be used for rentals, it could be used for hotel business.

That would consitute an expansion; the commission decided to vote against the remodel.

In other business, the commission:

• Approved a use permit for For Car Buffs, Motor Boutique in The Mall on the eastside of San Carlos Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues. The shop will sell gift shop-type accessories for cars and drivers.

The permit includes a condition that prohibits the store, an extension of Rocky Harter's shop in The Crossroads, from selling T-shirts depicting "local celebrities." Harter assured the commission he has no intention of selling such items.

Harter did object, however, to another condition regulating his window display. As written, the permit would have stopped him from using clothing as a part of a display.

Harter objected, stating he felt they were getting into something that was not a part of their authority.

The commission retained the condition but changed it to allow up to 10 percent of clothing in the window.

lucrative for the consultant.

The 80 consultants working at Pac Bell reportedly earn $1,350 daily.

But there seems to be more to it than money for the people who flock to be near Krone and his teachings every month or so.

The more the followers of Krone learn about his methodology, the more they want to come back and bask in the process.

"I think that sometimes I'm cheating," says Mang, after five years of teachings. " 'Cause I get paid to do this work."

'Science Camp or Bust!'

By SHARRON DOUGLAS
Principal, Carmel River School

"SCIENCE CAMP or Bust!" is the cry heard as CUSD fifth-graders depart for their Outdoor School experience. Students from Tularcitos, Captain Cooper, and River schools will participate in an Outdoor Education program May 26-29 at a YMCA camp at La Honda.

Science Camp is a total experience educationally and socially, in the outdoors, which cannot be duplicated in the regular classroom. Giant redwood trees, green meadows, clear running streams and springs, the immense Pacific Ocean and undisturbed groves of buckeye allow students to experience the mysteries of nature.

During their week at camp, the students are instructed by specialists in the natural sciences and conservation by going out on trails through the woods, to the tidepools at the beach, on night hikes, and in the laboratories at the camp site.

Accompanied by their teachers, classes attend camp as a group, but are housed in different cabins so they can have the experience of meeting and living with other children. With the cabin group as a basic unit, the students are divided into small classes to better experience firsthand contact with the plants and animals of the area.

Cabin counselors are students from Carmel High School. Many of these students participated in the Outdoor Education program as fifth-grade students. They volunteer four days of their time to spend with a group of 10 children, providing understanding and care to their charges. It is an exhausting, rewarding, and challenging task and we appreciate their support.

Carmel Unified School District has participated in an Outdoor Education program for many years. We value the experience as an enhancement to our regular classroom instructional program. The children grow socially, academically, and become more responsible and independent. We appreciate the opportunity to provide this exceptional experience to our children.

Summer swimming pre-registration held through May 22

DOLLARS & SENSE

By Anthony Piazza & Marshall Bloom

The Covered Call Caper

Part I. Appearances Are Deceiving

THEY WERE just a pair of investment cops, two guys trying to preserve capital, conservative maybe, but lean and mean. Actually, they were neither as lean nor as mean as they thought, but people generally didn't like to break that particular little bubble.

"Looks like he did himself in," Bloom finally said.

"Horrible," Piazza added, "just horrible."

They had stopped on their walk along the beach. In the distance they could see the growing community of structures that was the Spanish Bay development. But Spanish Bay couldn't compel their sight like the dead body before their eyes.

"Yup, he did himself in."

"Totally mangled."

"Seagulls should be more careful."

"Same way I feel. They screech and swoop after everything. It's a wonder more of them don't end up like this one."

"Speaking of coming to a sad end, Piazza, I'm reminded of our chat about the riskiness of options."

"You mean the one we had last night as we drove into town along the Carmel Valley Road, heading for Pacific Grove and that new Chinese Food Emporium we had heard about?"

"Exactly."

"You asked me if I could figure out what happened to the money an options speculator lost when he crashed to earth like that defunct bird we just passed."

"And I said that it doesn't go to the exchange because the exchange is simply providing the premises and supervision for the traders."

"Bloom, stop. Let's take this mystery apart piece by piece."

Sitting down on a large driftwood log, they methodically examined the problem. In the distance the sun slid into the Pacific like a soft scoop of tangerine sherbet, the kind of dessert one might have after dinner at the Chinese Food Emporium.

"Okay, Piazza. Number one, what's an option?"

"The right to buy or sell a hundred shares of a stock. Somebody else's shares, I might add."

Bloom paused. Cogs spun in his finely tuned detective noggin.

"I think we're onto something. When an options speculator buys a call option he's buying the right to somebody's hundred shares."

"Bloom, that's it. I see it. A guy says, 'hey speculator, you want my hundred shares of American Express, you can have them at exactly $35 per share. Only pay me $1 per share for the privilege.' "

"That's right, Piazza. But the option eventually expires, say in three months. And if American Express hasn't gone above $35 per share, then the speculator—"

"The options buyer."

"Loses not only his right to buy the hundred shares but all his money as well. And he loses that money to the owner of the hundred shares of American Express."

"Alias the options seller."

"On the one hand, Piazza, you've got a dead bird—"

"And on the other hand, Bloom, you've got a fat cat."

For a while, in the twilight, they watched the waves roll onto the darkening beach.

"Bloom, there's something missing here. More info needed. And I know just who we have to see to get filled in on the rest, the past master of occult investment ideas, Ardith the Amazing."

"Piazza, you're right. Ardith will know. But we'll have to wait till next week to see her because this week's column has just run out of space."

Next Week. Ardith and the Almond Chicken.

(Messrs. Piazza and Bloom, associate vice presidents at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., can be contacted for additional information at 373-1861 or P.O. Box 631, Monterey, 93940.)

EDITORIAL: A REAL PROBLEM

'Twere better if some parents did not send their children to high school and the university, if the sole product of those institutions is to be an increasing number of impossible young snobs, who seem to assume that it is a mark of culture to insult their elders and social equals. These things have been noticed in Carmel, but it is only just to say that it is not peculiar to this place. Parents and school authorities should grapple with this problem.

CARMEL TO ADOPT PACIFIC UNIFORM BUILDING CODE

Unless something unforeseen happens, Carmel city council is all set to adopt the Pacific Uniform Building Code at its next meeting, June 9. At that time first reading will be given an ordinance declaring this code, long urged by local architects, the law of Carmel. This will give City Inspector B. W. Adams a mighty weapon in enforcing minimum building standards, and make him building inspector in fact. Hitherto he could only shake his head and tut-tut and make reports to the council, but if there were bad building practices going on, he couldn't, officially, do a thing about it.

DEL MONTE DOG SHOW HAS LARGEST ENTRY IN 37-YEAR HISTORY

Fifteen hundred and thirty-seven purebred dogs, an increase of 163 dogs over last year, have had their entry fees paid in anticipation of blue ribbons and trophies, also all-coveted points toward championships, obtainable at the Del Monte Kennel Club's 37th Annual All-Breed Dog Show and Obedience Trial, an unbenched show, which will be held Sunday on the lawns in front of the Del Monte Lodge, according to Frank Grover, president of the club.

KEEPING THE LINES OPEN

Carmel will have the cleanest sewer lines on the Peninsula, promises Carmel Sanitary District Manager Max Drewien.

Using what's called a high velocity sewer cleaner, the district's crew has been clearing out Carmel's sewer system with high water pressure devices that use recycled water.

This kind of cleaning operation is important, according to Drewien, particularly because of the reduced sewage flow since water rationing took place. Drewien says the district now discharges only a million gallons a day of effluent into the sea, compared to a normal two million gallons. Reduced flow means reduced water to carry the solids through sewer lines.

WHO WOULD OWN NEW DAM?

If voters of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District decide to construct another dam on the Carmel River, who would own the multi-million-dollar project?

That's a question certain to be raised as the debate about construction of another dam heats up in the months ahead — regardless of whether the board of directors pursues a $43 million or $60 million project.

Would the taxpayers of the Monterey Peninsula, in effect, be asked to subsidize profits for a private corporation — California-American Water Co. — if a dam is constructed? That's another question sure to be asked.

Fire season began May 18

Los Padres National Forest Supervisor Art Carroll announced that the "official" fire season in the forest began May 18, but all burn permits issued by the Forest Service are cancelled immediately.

Caroll's announcement came just as California Gov. George Deukmedian proclaimed May 11-17 as Wildland Fire Prevention Week.

"We are not imposing our seasonal closing on the backcountry areas of the forest at this time," said Carroll. "We will evaluate the fire danger on a day-to-day basis, and when the situation warrants, we will be closing about 185,000 acres of the backcountry."

Carroll also stated the "Stage I" restrictions are not being implemented now. A "Stage I" imposes some stipulations on the use of fire outside of developed campgrounds. Those stipulations will be put into effect at the same time the backcountry closure is announce. However, permits for all types of campfires outside of maintained campgrounds were required as of May 15. The permits are free, and may be obtained at ranger stations or at the forest supervisor's office in Goleta.

"In preparation for the fire season, engines and crews are being deployed now," the supervisor said, "and fire suppression aircraft will begin arriving on station June 1."

"Many areas of the forest have received less than normal amounts of moisture this year," Carroll said. "It behooves all of us to use extra care and caution in the use of fire, especially when camping in the forest. Most of our wildfires, 82 percent, are caused by people, and the majority of them are caused by escaped campfires."

Carroll noted that the area to eventually be placed off-limits to the public this year is much smaller than in years past.

"As a result of the huge wildfires in 1985, more of the forest can remain open during the summer months," Carroll said. "The acreage to be closed this year is about 130,000 acres less than in previous years."

High school art scholars honored

SOMEONE REMARKED, "This is the last of the free lunches," referring to the luncheon held Saturday in the art-deco Paragon Restaurant in Salinas.

The California Arts Scholars Recognition Luncheon was organized by Roderick Dewar, president of the Monterey County Cultural Council (MCCC), and funded by the Burlington Northern Foundation for the El Paso Natural Gas Co.

MCCC is a partner of the California Arts Council (a state agency started in 1981), which is the agency for the new California State Summer School for the Arts (CSSSA) to be held the first time this year. CSSSA is funded through a public/private partnership to provide an intensive summer residential training program in the arts for approximately 400 high school students who are talented in dance, music, visual arts, crafts, creative writing, theater and film/video. All county students throughout the state who have successfully completed the preliminary review process will audition for a place in the school, as will the five who were honored at this luncheon.

California Arts Scholars selected from Monterey County to compete for the summer school were Tara Larson (photography), Christopher Lines and Leslie Parks (both for visual arts) are from North Monterey County High School; Janey Kim (visual arts) is from Monterey High and vocalist Aimee Puentes attends Salinas High. Each received an embossed commemorative medallion with the state seal. Should they pass auditions they will attend the four-week concentrated training July 6 to Aug. 2.

Medals were presented by county supervisors Barbara Shipnuck and Sam Karas who said, "The Greeks started culture and I am pleased to be able to present the first arts award." Other awards presentations were made by supervisor Marc Del Piero.

Dewar (of Pebble Beach) introduced VP Gary Smith (Hartnell art professor), and Rep. Leon Panetta (Carmel Valley) who said, "I think in the future we will be remembered by our arts and I wish to congratulate the students for their artistic achievements and to the council for recognizing them."

Other distinguished guests attending were Mae Johnson (principal of Monterey High), Sam Ferguson, (president of Monterey Peninsula College), Dennis Carocci (principal of North County High), Richard Tyler (director of Sunset Center), Joyce Wright (president of Monterey County Symphony Association), Sue Dewar, (state's art council member), parents of the scholars, teachers and others vitally interested in the cultural fabric of our country.

MUSIC! MUSIC! MUSIC!

The whole area was filled with music last Sunday afternoon. The Monterey County Symphony drew a crowd to the Naval Postgraduate School for its annual outdoor "Sunday In the Park Pops Concert;" music critic Patrick Franklin talked about music at the library; a duo-piano team gave a recital; and there was a Spring Salon.

"Mozart's The Magic Flute — from the Silly to the Sublime" was a Sunday afternoon salon given by the Carmel Bach Festival Associates. Dr. Clifford ("Kip") Cranna (of the S.F. Opera) talked about the Mozart opera and brought with him Susan Patterson and Thomas Potter who sang the songs that were hummed on the streets of Europe in 1791. It was amusing, musically rewarding, and everything a salon should be.

The gracious Maestro and Mrs. Sandor Salgo were on hand for the High Tea at Highlands Inn Fireside Room to complete the afternoon salon. More than 60 Bach buffs came to the event that CBF Associates presented to generate a year-round presence for the Bach Festival, celebrating its Golden Jubilee this summer.

Camille Olaeta and Dorothy Heer presented their 22nd musical gift to the community Sunday afternoon when they gave a duo-piano recital at the Santa Catalina Performing Arts Center. The audience loved every moment of Grieg's Opus 51, Jean Francaix's exotic dances, Fledermaus Paraphrase by Johann Strauss (arranged by Stephen Kovacs), and the great music of George Gershwin. It was a true delight for everyone.

PANHELLENICS DINE AT SAN SOUCI

The Monterey Bay National Panhellenic Alumnae met for its installation and scholarship awards luncheon at the San Souci Restaurant in Carmel.

Wendy Yengt (of Pebble Beach), who is a member of the Delta Delta Delta Sorority, received the $300 scholarship for 1987. Wendy is a junior majoring in broadcast/journalism at Oregon State. She works 15 hours a week along with a full class schedule; during the summer she is an intern at KMST-TV.

The following officers were installed: president, Mrs. T.W. Imlay (Pebble Beach); first vice president Mrs. Glen Engholm (Monterey); second vice president Ms. Joanie Peacock (Carmel); treasurer, Mrs. Shirley Payne (Pebble); recording secretary, Mrs. Charles Gruber (Carmel); and Mrs. Keith Roberson (Carmel).

SUPERVISOR SAM Karas presented the first California State Arts Medallion to Janey Kim of Monterey High School.

ALTHOUGH LESLIE Parks has been painting for only six months she won a medal for her artwork at the MCCC luncheon in Salinas. Marc Del Piero presented the award to her.

HEATHER-ON-THE-HILLS HERALDS "BRIGADOON"

The Forest Theater, California's first open-air theater (producing plays since 1910) will open the summer season with a hint-o'-heather on the hills June 5. "The Poseidon Room of La Playa Hotel will be transformed into Brigadoon for guests of the Forest Theater Guild's Preview Party," said Donna Marek, chairperson.

Not only will the room smell of heather but musical numbers from the season's opener (June 11) — Lerner and Lowe's Brigadoon will entertain guests, along with pipers piping and the exciting sword dance. Stars are Linda Purdy, Keith Decker, Lavonne Rae Andrews, and Todd Lueders.

So send your $30 to the Forest Theater Guild so that you can "kilt up," put on your black tie, or merely stick a twig of heather in your hair or your lapel as you "go-a-roamin" to La Playa Hotel on June 5 from 7 to 10 p.m.

SERENDIPITY TREASURE TROVE

Austin Provins is blessed with the gift of serendipity. This gift brought him a treasure trove of postcards — photographic aerial shots make back in the '20s and '30s.

He had been called to help a lady in Carmel who could not crawl up to her attic to find the source of trouble she was experiencing in that area.

Austin and a friend went up for her and found a number of dusty, damp rotting boards. As one board fell down, he saw bright colors and took his flashlight for a better look.

He had uncovered a carton of 20,000 postcards made by artist/photographer E.W. White, with 1,000 cards each of 20 buildings and sites around the Monterey Peninsula. All were in mint condition and meant to be found.

Some of the subjects — Colton Hall (when it was painted salmon pink), the Old Del Monte Hotel (in Pebble), the first brick building (Monterey), The Municipal Swimming Pool (Pacific Grove), Point Pinos Lighthouse (PG), The Old Custom House, the Royal Presidio Chapel, the Monterey Fishing fleet, House of Four Winds (on Calle Principal in Monterey), scenes of Pebble and Pacific Grove.

Postage on the cards was 1¢. (Just think, postal rates have gone up 1,400 percent since then!) Even so, the Depression must have left no money for such purchases. Who knows?

The cards were purchased from the owner (who wishes to remain anonymous) and Austin's first wish is to see these beautiful cards in the archives of various historical sites that were photographed from the air and then handpainted.

Out of this serendipitous discovery came plans to develop the Rolls Royce of cards with the proper setting in which to merchandise them. The Old Carmel Postcard Shop will be done in brass and wood with blown-up shots of old Carmel. The same plan will be followed for other cities here and abroad.

Any organization interested in purchases for archival purposes may contact Austin Provins at 375-1168.

REAL ESTATE TODAY

Foreclosure

By Jayde Thompson

When we think of foreclosure we often think of bad melodramas in which widows and orphans are forced out of their homes into the winter's night. Contrary to its ominous reputation, foreclosure is actually a fairly complex legal procedure designed to protect the rights of all parties involved in the sale of property.

Let's take a straightforward example. You have recently sold your home and, as part of the deal, agreed to carry the loan for the purchaser. The loan is secured by a deed of trust to the property. If, for some reason, the purchaser cannot repay the loan, you can begin foreclosure proceedings to recover the money owed to you by selling the home to someone else.

You must, however, carefully follow the procedures prescribed by law to make sure that the original purchaser's rights are respected. If you and the purchaser agreed that, as part of the deed of trust, the sale of the home in the event of a foreclosure would be handled by a third party (the "trustee"), you may be able to avoid court proceedings.

A foreclosure, even at its simplest, can be a lengthy and complicated affair — there are many variations of this one example. A homeowner would be wise to get the advice of both an experienced realtor and an attorney when considering it. For more information, call me, Jayde Thompson, your Carmel specialist at Real Estate By The Sea at 624-1444 or stop by my office at San Carlos and Seventh.

VENTANA WILDERNESS REPORT

BY GLENN R. STEWART

Bald eagles return

OUR BALD eagle release and population restoration program will begin in earnest this summer with the repatriation of six birds to the central coast region.

This endangered species population restoration effort endeavors to reestablish nesting bald eagles to the slopes of Big Sur where they commonly existed until one-half century ago. Here is how the program works.

A team of biologists will travel to Vancouver, British Columbia, during the second week of June. A large van will be rented at the airport to accomodate people, equipment, and — for the return trip — six half-grown bald eagles.

There is a ferry ride to Vancouver Island and then a drive of several hours to the northern tip of the island where the collections will take place.

Helicopter flights will be required to identify nests with young at the appropriate age for collection. First, nests where collections took place last year for another release effort will be examined as a part of research to determine the long-term effects of these collections on donor populations. We do know that bald eagles are abundant in coastal British Columbia and Canadian biologists agree that the subtraction of a few eaglets to assist with our population recovery, will not adversely impact the population.

Then, additional flights will identify suitable nests for the collection of eaglets. Bald eagles will be collected for translocation, only from nests that contain two or more young.

Upon the identification of suitable nests from the air, we'll rent a boat locally to reach them. Biologists who are also expert at climbing around the huge bald eagle nests and handling the young found there, will collect the eaglets. If all goes well, we will have six birds in three days of climbing.

They will be fed fresh fish and raw meat during the trip home. That excursion involves rides in the van, on the ferry, aboard the Delta jet, and then four-wheel drive deep into the mountains overlooking Big Sur. We will visit veterinarians on

•

A BALD eagle takes off from a top of tree in this photo by Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary co-founder Sal Lucido. The group will attempt to bring the bald eagle back to the Big Sur area after a 50-year absence.

ONCE IN Big Sur, the birds will luxuriate atop a tower that has been especially designed and constructed for their use. It has an 18-square foot platform, large stick nest, and an observation blind..The 30-foot tower overlooks the Anderson Canyon drainages and the Pacific Ocean from an elevation of 2,300 feet. An enclosed ladder alows us to reach the blind on the platform for feeding and observation without being in visual contact with the birds.

It is important that the eagles grow up as wild as possible in their new home so that they can make a natural transition to independence and eventually return to breed on the central coast. For that reason the eagles never know the true source of their food. Our attendants secretly put food out through trap doors and under the cover of darkness so they never become tame.

The majestic birds fledge from the tower at about three months of age and begin making short exploration flights in the vicinity of the tower. After a period of time, they increase the duration of these flights to the extent that they will probably leave the county regularly and perhaps leave the state.

The important thing is that our birds will have spent the last third of their nesting period and fledged from Anderson Canyon, Big Sur. The "natal affinity" thus developed will draw them back to nest at sexual maturity. It is probable that certain individuals will not disperse, and will instead, remain in the area to cause great excitement on the part of central coast birders.

As you may know from previous columns, this ongoing project is being funded by local foundations, corporations and individuals. You can be a part of this important project by making a contribution to or joining the membership of the non-profit Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary at P.O. Box 894, Carmel Valley. This is one of those jobs that just won't be done unless the community continues its support. Thanks for your past help!

CARMEL RIVER WATER NEWS

By Henrietta Stern

Eeny, middy, mighty, no...

EENY, MIDDY, mighty, no.... This variation of the old nursery rhyme nicely summarized the four alternative projects that will be analyzed in detail in the EIR/EIS for the proposed New San Clemente Dam.

They include a 16,000, 20,000, and 29,000 acre-foot (AF) reservoir as well as the "no project" alternative. Each San Clemente project will include new production facilities, such as new wells in Carmel Valley and coastal Seaside, in addition to increased capacity at the Begonia filter plant.

Some of you sharp-eyed readers might notice that these projects seem a little different from the "finalists" I discussed earlier this year. Right you are!

Last December, after many months of screening various water supply alternatives, four finalists were selected as "feasible" alternatives for coequal analysis in the EIR/EIS. (Recall that the "losers" will also be discussed, but in a separate alternative chapter.) The four finalists included San Clemente reservoirs ranging in size from 21,000 AF to 29,000 AF. Some were combined with new wells, while others were not.

So why the change to the broader size range of 16,000 AF to 29,000? And why are the new production facilities now included as an integral part of each project? The major reason is new information obtained while calibrating the computer model. Recall that calibration compares the simulated computer results for certain years to actual measurements to test how well the model represents the physical water resource system. If the model is "off" for certain factors, adjustments are made until the model more accurately matches reality. A good analogy is tuning the strings of a guitar to match the pure notes of a pitch pipe.

Happily, our model calibrated well and only minor "tuning" was necessary. Nevertheless, changes to the model due to calibration did result in significantly more simulated water yield, hence the smaller project sizes. In fact, reservoirs as small as 9,000 AF met yield requirements, but only reservoirs 16,000 AF or larger met drought reserve, rationing, environmental and cost criteria.

It soon became evident that increased production capacity (new wells in Carmel Valley and Seaside) was necessary when computer simulations for the year 2020 predicted water shortages despite a nearly full reservoir. The shortages weren't due to lack of water; insufficient facilities to distribute the water to the community were the culprit. As our computer expert explains it, "It's like a bank with plenty of money, but only one teller available to dole it out to a long line of customers." Get the picture?

When the computer showed that smaller New San Clemente projects were meeting yield requirements, another question immediately popped into our minds. What about the tributary reservoirs or "non-dam" combination of alternatives that were previously rejected as "infeasible"? Could they now make the grade? District technical staff sprang into action to find out.

COMPUTER RUNS were made for each alternative and their performance was compared to the screening criteria used previously. Though each alternative performed better than before, they did not meet several important criteria and were again deemed "infeasible."

In the next few months, the benefits and impacts of the 16,000 AF, 20,000 AF and 29,000 AF New San Clemente projects will be compared to the "no project" alternative for many factors. These include firm water yield, drought reserve storage, severity and frequency of water supply shortages, need for rationing, river flow and fishery benefits, inundation of wildlife habitat, erosion, impact on beaches, community growth and associated effects, dam break impact, archaeology, and endangered species, to name a few! This work is reviewed in the EIR/EIS. Once the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board formally selects the preferred project at a public hearing, it's your turn! Specifically, on Nov. 3, 1987 you'll have the opportunity to cast an advisory vote to approve or disapprove of the proposed project.

It's a very busy time right now for district staff and consultants. Reams of computer printouts are being carefully analyzed and specialists are out in the field assessing potential environmental impacts. Several important reports have already been completed, including archaeology, dam break, fish passage, and Seaside coastal ground water resources. In the next few months, I'll keep you abreast of the latest facts and findings. Stay tuned!

Pine Inn leads

BRONCO STANDINGS as of May 15: Pine Inn, 5-2; Derek Rayne, 4-3; La Playa, 3-4; Carmel Valley Disposal, 2-5.

Pine Inn beat Carmel Valley Disposal on May 11, 16-10. CVD leading hitters: Jimmy Gill (3-for-3 with yet another home run), Bill Winslow, Gannon Ogden (with a ground-rule double), and Josh Weiner. For Pine Inn, Mark Brophy (3-for-4 with 3 RBI) and Cory Lauterbach (3-for-4 with a triple) were leading hitters. Carl Dauphine (CVD) and Brophy showed fielding skill in center, while shortstop David Palshaw (PI) made a terrific throw to first for the final out of the game.

Derek Rayne beat La Playa 13-2 on May 12. Leading hitters were Frank Melicia, Abram DeAnda and Jon Bohlman (all DR) and Tim Wiesner (LP). Melicia also made two outstanding plays at shortstop and, along with LP's Willie Moore, pitched three strong innings.

On May 14 Pine Inn and Derek Rayne played their second tiebreaker in as many weeks and Pine Inn was again the victor. Final score: 17-14. Outfielders Jono Spaulding and Adam Chaplan helped preserve the win with outstanding catches in the bottom of the final inning; teammate Mark Brophy, as pitcher, allowed only one hit. Hot bats for Pine Inn belonged to David Palshaw, Ranon Masliyah (his double brought in Palshaw to break the tie), Brophy, Marc Colliard, Spaulding (another double) and Cory Lauterbach. Jon Tedrow (with a double) and Frank Melicia (who stole home) were top DR batters.

Mustang standings as of May 15: Dick Bruhn, 5-1; Yates, Downer, Dyer and Kirkpatrick, 5-2; Carmel Realtors, 3-3-1; Books, Inc., 2-5-1; County Mounties, 1-5.

Carmel Realtors took a solid 9-5 victory over Books, Inc. on May 9. Doubles were hit by Steamer Pease (BI) and John Wandke (CR); Pease was also a tough pitcher, striking out three consecutive batters in the third inning. Matt Heinrich was responsible for a double play by the winners.

On May 11, County Mounties defeated Books, Inc. 12-10. The Mounties scored six runs in the first two innings and led the game until the fifth, when Books went ahead by one run. CM batters rallied back with five more runs in the sixth, and held the lead to win the game. Paul Huntington was the leading CM hitter (3-for-3 with 4 RBI and two doubles), while BI's Channing Griggs (2-for-2 with 2 RBI and double) was her team's top hitter and did a great job at first base. Robbie Koontz, CM's catcher, was strong behind the plate.

Despite a knockout grand slam home run by Carmel Realtor's Matt Heinrich, Yates, Downer, Dyer and Kirkpatrick was the winner of the May 12 game. Final score: 15-9. Heinrich and John Davi led the hitting for the Realtors, while Michael Dilks, Jesse Lamb and Jeff Reeves were top batters for YDDK. A double play was turned by YDDK's Cooper Scollan and Mikko Magnusson.

Housing donors for the Carmel Bach Festival have the opportunity to host one of the festival's many out-of-town musicians. Fifty members of the orchestra and 35 members of the chorale come to Carmel from around the country to perform in this renowned festival to which Carmel has played host for 50 years. This year musicians arrive July 1 to begin rehearsals and stay through Aug. 2.

Housing donations vary from offering a room and bath in a private home to offering an entire house of any size to house many musicians. Since musicians are busy with all-day rehearsals and evening performances, they are undemanding guests.

For further information, contact Nana Faridany at the Carmel Bach Festival office, 624-1521.

OBITUARIES

Helen M. Billingham

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea for Helen Merchant Billingham of Carmel, a Christian Science practitioner, who died April 26. She was 83.

Born Sept. 18, 1903 in Coos Bay, Ore., she had lived in Carmel since 1965.

She attended Berkeley High School and went to New York as a pianist and worked in radio as an accompanist. She married Ray Billingham in New York, and later they moved to Carmel. Her husband died several years ago.

One of her great pleasures was being a substitute organist at the Naval Postgraduate School chapel and churches on the Monterey Peninsula, including Carmel Valley.

Survivors include a stepdaughter, Mrs. Arnold Nelson of Connecticut; a stepson, Ray John Billingham of Pasadena; and a nephew, Dr. John Merchant of Berkeley.

At her request, no services took place. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

A vow of silence

CARMEL ROTARY CLUB, LA PLAYA HOTEL
From May 19, 1983 edition of Carmel Pine Cone

Oh Almighty and Eternal God, be pleased to bless this food to our use. Oh Lord, while we are asking for favors, this is a big one that we need: Keep us gentle in word, in deed and in spirit. We boldly walk into a room marked, "Gentlemen," even when we have not had a gentlemanly thought or performed a gentlemanly act for weeks.

Psychiatrists often diagnose us as having an inferiority complex, but most of us have just the opposite. We feel superior to others, and without a qualm, we take credit for all the talents we possess and all the acts that we perform.

When we have special gifts and talents that make us stand out in a crowd, help us, Oh Lord, to realize that we have received them from Thee. We delight in being praised, but help us to glory in the achievements of others and help us to rejoice in their success.

Finally, what this country needs more than a silent majority is a silent minority and perhaps our lives would be more tranquil if they both took a vow of silence. Amen.

Marvis Martin, others to return

Ambitious 61st season announced by Carmel Music Society

THE CARMEL Music Society will open its 61st season Saturday, Oct. 10 with a concert by pianist Aldo Ciccolini. The season will continue through May 1988 with performances by Marvis Martin, the Cleveland and Meliora Quartets and others.

All performances will take place at Sunset Theater in Carmel. Season tickets are priced at $42, $46 and $50. Admission to the Marvis Martin concert is $12 each, all seats. Tax-deductible contributions in several categories can also be made to the Carmel Music Society.

Aldo Ciccolini will appear Saturday, Oct. 10. Considered one of the greatest living interpreters of French music, Ciccolini is Italian by birth and French by adoption, having chosen to live in France since winning first prize at the Marguerite Long/Jacques Thibaut Competition in 1949.

His recordings of the five concertos by Saint-Saens were awarded both the Edison Prize and the Charles Cros Prize, and his performances of the complete works of Erik Satie have not only won for him recognition beyond the classical concert hall but remain to this day the most popular recordings of 20th century piano music ever made.

His worldwide travels allow him to champion music which he feels has been unjustly neglected. He took his Cafe Concert, music by Erik Satie, to the venue of New York's leading pop music cabaret, The Bottom Line, for two sold-out performances.

Bass James Morris will appear in concert on Friday, Nov. 13. Morris joined the Metropolitan Opera at age 23, beginning his career there singing small basso roles. By 27 he had graduated to such starring roles as Don Giovanni and the Mozart Figaro.

Soloist Pamela Field, principal soprano with the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, will join the choir on its tour, taking time out from her broadcasting and concertising in the U.K. and Europe. One of the highlights of their program will be the debut of a work by Welsh composer Richard Roderick Jones, especially commissioned for this American tour. He is a graduate of the Royal College of Music, and has distinguished himself in the world of opera, choral ballet, and festival compositions.

The choir's traditional classical and modern selections range from Gounod to Lloyd Webber.

Rub tentacles with experts at fourth squid festival

THE HYDROMATICS play rock and roll classics of the '50s and '60s, blues, Motown and even a little Glenn Miller. They will entertain as part of the fourth annual Great Monterey Squid Festival, set Saturday and Sunday, May 23-24.

A CELEBRATION of cephalopods, an excuse for entertainment and education, the fourth annual Great Monterey Squid Festival arrives Saturday and Sunday, May 23-24, at the Fairgrounds in Monterey.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. both days during this project of the Monterey Kiwanis Club that benefits multiple local charities.

THe oak-studded fairgrounds, located at the junction of Fairgrounds and Garden roads in Monterey, will be transformed into Squid Central for the Memorial Day weekend. Epicures can savor squid prepared in numerous ways, and then take home the recipe for their favorite dish.

Entertainment, from rock and roll to puppet shows to folk music, is included in the admission fee of $4 for adults and $2 for children ages 6 to 12. Children 5 and under can attend the Squid Festival for free.

Not to be overlooked are the educational touch tanks: exhibits and plant explanations supplied by local marine biologists.

Last year the festival raised $26,000 to be divided among local non-profit organizations.

Bentley Brothers Circus preserves traditonal 3-rings

WITH THREE BIG rings of fun, excitement and suspense, Bentley Brothers International Circus, sponsored by Monterey County Deputy Sheriff's Benefit Association, is coming to the Monterey Peninsula College Stadium at 1, 4 and 8 p.m. Monday, May 25.

The new 1987 edition of the circus presents two hours of non-stop family entertainment with great circus talent from Europe, U.S.A. and Mexico with astounding feats, amazing routines, and death-defying acts.

The circus is bringing the greatest congregation of top circus stars from the show capitals of the world ever seen in this area.

The program includes wild animal acts, performing horses, outstanding aerialists and acrobats, high-wire daredevils, and The Bentley Brothers contingent of clowns.

Carol Marcan, from Yugoslavia, one of the greatest female wild animal trainers, will put her den of ferocious Bengal Tigers and Ligers through their paces. (The Ligers are a unique attraction, part lion, part tiger, and are two of only seven in the world.) Diane Moyer will present her Royal Spanish Stallions — dancing and prancing in all three rings; also Showman Stimax with his clever chimpanzees, those natural clowns of the jungle, will be on parade.

BIG CATS will fill the three rings of the Bentley Brothers International Circus. The circus will be in town for three performances on Monday, May 25 at the Monterey Peninsula College stadium.

Other featured acts and performers include Nirobi, with the renowned and educated Elephant act — the powerful, ponderous Pachyderm, and Colonel Thomas Bentley, doyen of Equestrian Elegance guiding his steed through intricate maneuvers with imperceptible commands.

Also on the program is the dainty darling of the air, Princess Morning Star, who demonstrates feats of grace that's daring beyond compare. Then prepare for the Celebrated Cabaleros, trapeze masters of the quadruple somersault, twirling, whirling and dancing in the air.

A change of pace is comedy cavorting and acrobatic antics of the two revolving ladders, and from Corsica, the Rubino Bros. display dexterity, unsurpassed agility, and split-second timing on the Tetter Board.

The program rounds off with the exciting "Wheel of Death" where the intrepid performer works without any safety device or net. It's mind boggling, foot stompin', eye poppin' stuff. And ever present are those Master of Mirth, the Bentley Brothers Contingent of Clowns.

Tickets are $8.50 for adults and free to children where circus posters are displayed.

Carmel Music Society brings leading soloists, groups to Sunset Theater for its 61st season

Now 30, he is in demand at the Metropolitan and other opera companies in North and South America for such stellar parts as Boris Godunov, the "Faust" Mephistopheles, King Philip in "Don Carlos" as well as the Mozart roles.

The Cleveland and Meliora Quartets will take the Sunset Theater stage on Wednesday, Feb. 10, 1988. The Cleveland Quartet is recognized as one of the great quartets of our time. Playing on a matched set of Stradivarius instruments once owned by Paganini, they have toured the world, performing on five continents, at the White House, recorded the complete Beethoven quartet cycle and more than 20 other chamber works and were the first classical artists ever to perform on the Grammy Awards telecast.

The Meliora Quartet "ranks among the premier ensembles of our time," wrote the Boston Globe after their debut at Jordan Hall. Formed in January 1982 by four young musicians, the quartet is composed of Ian Swensen, violin; Calvin Wiersma, violin; Maria Lambros, viola, and Elizabeth Anderson, cello.

In 1984 the Meliora Quartet won both the Fischoff and Coleman National Chamber Music competitions and received stunning reviews for Boston and New York debuts. The quartet appeared at the 1985 Festival of Two Worlds in Spoleto, Italy, as the quartet-in-residence.

Pianist Annie Fischer will perform on Wednesday, March 9, 1988. The artist made her Budapest debut as an 8-year-old child prodigy, stunning the public and critics alike with her performance of Beethoven's Piano Concerto in C major.

Four years later she had already become the center of attention in the international music scene by playing concertos by Mozart and Schumann in Zurich, winning universal acclaim with her technical command of the piano and with the spiritual depth of her interpretations.

The annual awards concert will take place on Saturday, March 19, 1988.

The winners of the society's vocal competition will be featured in this concert. The final auditions in the morning and afternoon of the same day are open to the public.

Guitarist Lisa Smith will appear on Friday, April 22, 1988.

Grand prize winner of the 1987 Carmel Music Society Competition, Smith received her bachelor's and master's degrees from U.C. San Diego, where she currently lectures in music and assists Pepe and Celin Romero.

In September 1986 she made her recording debut playing in Francisco de Madina's Concierto Vasco for four guitars and orchestra with the Bilbao National Orchestra and Pepe and Celin Romero.

Born and raised in Honolulu, Smith developed an interest in the Hawaiian guitar style, called kiho'alu while studying classical guitar. Besides her schedule of concerts she gives lecture/recitals linking the history of kiho'alu with classical and flamenco guitar styles.

The new season features an additional concert by soprano Marvis Martin, to be presented on Saturday, May 7, 1988. Martin is one of the most sought-after sopranos, appearing with the orchestras of New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Cincinatti, Montreal and Washington, D.C.

In recital she has performed in New York, Chicago, Paris and Los Angeles (Ambassador Cultural Foundation). Her operatic commitments have taken her to the Metropolitan Opera, Netherlands Opera, and the Aix-en-Provence Festival in France.

The society has also announced the date for rescheduling of the Hermann Prey concert which was to have taken place last March and cancelled due to Mr. Prey's illness. The concert will begin at 4 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 13 in Sunset Theater. Tickets that were previously issued will be honored at that time.

Riane Eisler signs new book at Thunderbird

Author Riane Eisler will be the guest of the Thunderbird Bookshop Saturday, May 23, from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. at a reception for her new book, The Chalice and The Blade: Our History, Our Future.

In this book, hailed by anthropologist Ashley Montague as "the most important book since Darwin's Origin of Species," Reisler examines the historical and prehistorical evidence of human development as it relates to women and feminine attributes. From this study she draws conclusions of societal evolution from a partner-based to a dominator-based paradigm of cultural values.

Eisler says her book "clears up a lot of mysteries, all the way from why was Eve taking advice from a serpent to why we are experiencing a great resurgence of the search for a goddess religion and for a more ecological and humane balanced world." She asks the questions, "Why do we hunt and persecute each other? Why is our world so full of man's infamous inhumanity to man — and to woman? What is it that chronically tilts us toward cruelty rather than kindness, toward war rather than peace, toward destruction rather than actualization?"

A resident of Carmel since 1979, Eisler grew up in Havana, Cuba after she and her family fled Austria and Nazi persecution. After emigrating to the U.S., she attended the University of California at Los Angeles, majoring in sociology and anthropology, Phi Beta Kappa. She is also the author of Dissolution: No Fault Divorce, Marriage, and the Future of Women and The Equal Rights Handbook.

The Thunderbird Bookshop is in the Barnyard, Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road. For more information call 624-1803.

GroveMont stages women's plays

THE 1987 Festival of Women's Plays, consisting of Girl Talk, Stevie and A Coupla White Chicks Sitting Around Talking will be staged from July 2 through Oct. 10 at the GroveMont Theater Arts Center.

"Response from last year's women's plays was so positive that our entire staff felt a second event was warranted. And if this year's festival proves as popular with local audiences, we plan to make the series an annual one," said Stephen Moorer, GroveMont founder and executive director.

Opening Thursday, July 2, San Diego actress-improvisationalist Sheri Glaser of the Egomaniacs, will present a one-woman show entitled Girl Talk. Glaser was presented the acting award for comedy from the Monterey County Theater critics for her work in the Egomaniac's touring production The Nickel-Weiner Roadmap to Enlightenment, a co-production of the Poetic Drama Institute and GroveMont Theater. The production by Glaser, all under the often humorous and sometimes serious theme of coping with life, was well received in its world premiere in San Diego. The GroveMont production will be the show's Northern California premiere. Girl Talk will play Thursday through Saturday evenings at 8 from July 2-25. There will be no performance Saturday, July 4.

Opening Thursday, Aug. 13 will be the Central Coast Premiere of Hugh Whitemore's Stevie based on the life and work of poet Stevie Smith. Starring GroveMont guest artist Rosamond Goodrich in the title role, the production portrays the poet's tragi-comic life by means of naturalistic dialogue with the characters by her own reminiscences and comments, and by numerous examples of her poems. The celebrated film of the same name, which was adapted from the play, was nominated for numerous Academy Awards. Directed by Ramie Wikdahl, Stevie will play Thursday through Saturday evenings at 8 and Sunday matinees at 2 p.m. from Aug. 13 through Sept. 5. Discount previews will be presented Aug. 6, 7, and 8 at 8 p.m.

The final production of the three-play series will be John Ford Noonan's A Coupla White Chicks Sitting Around Talking, opening Sept. 17 in its Central Coast premiere run. Directed by Carey Crockett, the play will be a co-production of Unicorn Theater and GroveMont. A long-running off-Broadway hit, the story follows two housewives, one from New York and one from Texas who, despite their many differences, develop a strong and lasting friendship. A Coupla White Chicks... will play Thursday through Saturday evenings at 8 and Sunday matinees at 2 p.m. from Sept. 17 through Oct. 10. Discount previews will be presented Sept. 14, 15 and 16 at 8 p.m.

Ticket prices for each production in the series on Thursdays and Sundays are $8.50 general admission, $7 for students, seniors and military.

On Friday and Saturday evenings prices are $1 more. A "mini-season" ticket for the series is available for $18. Advance tickets are available at Center Stage Ticketing at 649-5561. Reservations can be made by calling GroveMont at 649-6852.

Psychiatrist investigates Carl Jung's Process Work conclusions

A PSYCHIATRIST from Chicago will be featured at a Saturday, May 23 program titled "A Psychiatrist's Response to Process Work as a Development of Jung's Ideas" which is sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Friends of C.G. Jung.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. at All Saints Church, Ninth and Dolores, Carmel. Scott Sandage is medical director of the Center for Child and Family Psychiatric Services, Children's Memorial Hospital, Chicago.

He will address the question, "How do our somatic and behavioral responses to emotional upheavals provide sufficient symptoms for psychiatric interventions?" Dr. Sandage will describe how his treatment of children and adults has been affected by process work (also known as dreambodywork) ideas and methods. Then he will tell about the ways in which these ideas enhance our understanding of various chronic illness states. These include psychosomatic, autoimmune disease processes, hypochondriasis and other medical conditions which affect children and adults alike.

Questions derived from the book The Psychobiology of Mind-Body Healing by Ernest L. Rossi will be addressed to Dr. Sandage. A spokesman for the Friends of C.G. Jung, Joseph Pagano of Monterey, in making this announcement, declared that "We are very fortunate to have Dr. Sandage give us first-hand information about this frontier of psychobiology and its implications for all of us."

An informal group of people who are sharing an enthusiasm for the ideas of the Swiss physician, the Friends of C.G. Jung sponsor frequent events which are open to the public. Also, small groups meet regularly to pursue special interests, such as dream sharing, book reading (Inner World of Choice, by F. Wickes), typology, dreambodywork.

For public events, a registration/donation is suggested, and may be made at the door. For further information, write to 853 Pacific St., Monterey, or call 649-8809.

Changes announced for community band

The Monterey Community Band has undergone some major changes to include the appointment of a new conductor, new music, a new rehearsal site and a change in weekly rehearsal meeting dates. Approximately 25 musicians are now involved.

The band's first public outdoor concert is scheduled for Sunday, June 7, as a part of the City of Monterey's Birthday Party Celebration. The band is set to play from 2:15 to 3 p.m. on the historic grounds of City Hall.

The new conductor is Dick Robins, who also serves as Instrumental Music Director at Carmel High School and at the Frohman Academy. Robins has selected a repertoire of band music that reflects variety: from jazz to classical.

Additional band members are still needed. Interested individuals can join at any time. Weekly rehearsals are on Mondays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Monterey High School Band Room until June 1. A mini summer rehearsal break will take place from June 7 through July 6. Rehearsals will resume on July 7. Take note that the weekly meeting date will then change to Tuesday evenings. The time will remain from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The new meeting location will be at the Monterey Youth Center, 777 Pearl St.

Auditions are not necessary; however, those interested must be able to read music and to provide their own instrument. There are no registration fees involved.

YWCA conducts crisis line training class

Three times per year the YWCA offers training classes to women in the community who are interested in serving on the Domestic Violence Crisis Line.

These classes include the dynamics of family violence, crisis intervention techniques and appropriate legal action. This volunteer training is held on Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 6 to 9 p.m. for three consecutive weeks beginning on Tuesday, June 2 at the YWCA office, 404 Camino El Estero, Monterey.

Volunteers dedicated to helping others seek violence free relationships serve six hour shifts weekly, answering calls from their own homes.

The 24-hour crisis line handles over 100 calls a month. Volunteers find that the training provides them with opportunities to help others as well as developing counseling skills and providing career opportunities. For more information, call 649-0834.

Variety of visions reflected in new shows at P.G. Art Center

THE NEWEST collection of works shown at the Pacific Grove Art Center features cartoon and graphic art by Susan Collins, monoprints by Donald Weygant, recent paintings by Jerry Richman and photographs by members of Handicapped Activities Unlimited. A reception for the artists is planned 7 to 9 p.m. Friday, May 22. The art center is located at 568 Lighthouse Ave. in Pacific Grove.

The art center has gathered a significant collection of recent monoprints by Weygandt, whose work is in the collections of friends and peers: Frank Lobdell, Wayne Thiebaud and Richard Diebenkorn.

The 30 pieces represent a body of work completed by Weygandt during a hiatus from his duties as professor of art at the University of California at Santa Cruz.

Weygandt received his bachelor's degree in fine arts from Washington University in 1950 and his master's degree in fine arts from the University of Illinois in 1953. His exhibitions include works in the "Painters Behind Painters" show at the California Palace of the Legion of Honor in San Francisco and "20th Century Painting" at the Stanford Museum.

Susan Collins is a cartoonist and graphic artist who ran away from Chicago and the stresses of her own business last year to live and paint in Carmel. Her first show of paintings in the area is made up of large canvases in acrylic accompanied by free-standing, life-size cutout figures.

The influence of 15 years of cartooning experience is in evidence, but the canvases and figures flow with a painterly style and freedom that overwhelm the rigid demands of commercial art.

Gerry Richman, noted for his sculpture in the late '60s and early '70s, began painting seriously at that time. His sculpture is included in the collection of Ronald and Nancy Reagan. Recently Richman has been studying at UC Santa Cruz under Don Weygandt and Patrick Ahern.

His paintings, expressionist in nature, may be termed gestural abstractions and 10 of the 18 paintings to be shown are large oils on canvas, 6-feet by 8-feet.

Handicapped Activities Unlimited has a long history of organizing art exhibitions of work by handicapped individuals, offering a show each year since 1973. The photography work exhibited in Pacific Grove is the outcome of a photography project funded by the Monterey County Cultural Council, Kiwanis Club of Monterey, Monterey Peninsula Community Thrift Shop, National Pro-Am Youth Fund and the Polaroid Corp.

Fifteen individuals with mental, emotional and physical handicaps received instruction from photographer Pat Ross of Carmel. Project participants used automatically-developing film giving them immediate feedback about their work. Included in the exhibit are enlargements of photos chosen by participants and their instructor.

For more information about the latest exhibition of works at the Pacific Grove Art Center, contact the center at 375-2208.

GERALD RICHMAN, a Carmel Highlands artist who was noted in the '60s and '70s for his sculpture, will exhibit a collection of recent mixed media paintings at the Pacific Grove Art Center. The show opens with a reception from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday, May 22.

Museum focuses on the family of grasses

"FIELDS OF Grass," an exhibition of 66 drawings, watercolors, prints and herbarium specimens focusing on the family of grasses as a subject of artistic endeavor and botanical study, will open Tuesday, May 26 at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History. It continues through Sunday, June 21.

The exhibition has been organized by the Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation of Carnegie-Mellon University and the National Museum of Natural History, Smithsonian Institution. It will travel throughout the United States for two years under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service (SITES).

Grasses have influenced artists through the centuries. They are depicted in this exhibition in a variety of techniques by artists from the 16th century to the present. The works range from purely decorative renderings to technical scientific studies. They were selected from the collections of musuems, herbaria, artists and private collectors by James J. White, curator of art, Hunt Institute.

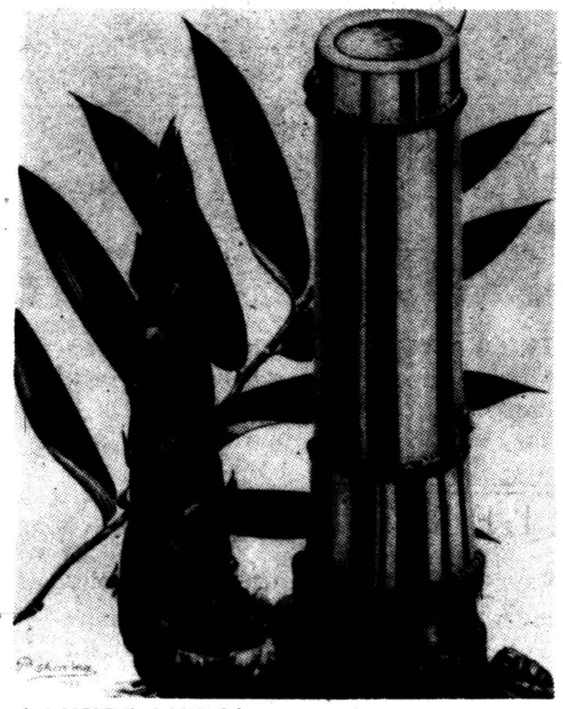
The family of grasses has more than 700 genera and over 10,000 species and is found on all continents at all but the highest elevations. It is the most abundant and widespread family of plants encompassing one-quarter of the earth's land surface. Grasses range in size, from about an inch (some varieties of "annuals") to over 100 feet tall and with branches up to 30 feet long ("woody bamboo").

Long before the advent of agriculture, mankind depended on wild grasses for grain. The rise of civilization was accompanied by the domestication of wild grasses for cereals, approximately 10,000 years ago.

People continue to depend upon grasses for over two-thirds of their nourishment. Utilitarian and recreational items such as timber, paper, clothing, dishes and furniture, flutes, kites and baseball bats are made from the many varieties of bamboo. The reeds, or coarse marsh grasses, provide fuel, construction materials and even mouthpieces for woodwind musical instruments. More obscure grasses are used for sachets in clothes, as sweeteners in hay and perfumes and in flavoring for certain Asian cuisines.

"Fields of Grass" has been supported in part by a grant from the Phillips Petroleum Foundation, Inc. Major lenders to the exhibition include the Hunt Institute; the National Geographic Society; The Linnean Society of London and the Smithsonian Institution.

An educational brochure on the varied uses of grasses and a full-color poster accompany the exhibition.



A MIXED-MEDIA image of striped bamboo by Indian artist P. Sharma is among the works exhibited at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History.

Faure 'Requiem' presented at All Saints' Church

GABRIEL FAURE'S "Requiem" Mass will be featured in one performance only at All Saints' Episcopal Church, Carmel, at 8 p.m. Sunday, May 24. The Memorial Weekend concert will be augmented by peninsula vocalists and an orchestra of strings, brass, harp and organ under the direction of All Saints' choir leader, Elizabeth Marcus. It is part of the church's continuing celebration of its 75th anniversary.

This chamber presentation of the "Requiem" follows Faure's original scoring which was designed for simplicity and intimacy in a private setting. Composed the year after his father's death, the piece is a personal statement of his filial feelings and is rarely performed on this scale today.

The "Requiem" will be presented in the church at Ninth and Dolores in Carmel. The public is invited to attend, and a donation of $5 is asked. Transportation is available. For more information, contact the church at 624-3883.

Looking Down from Upper Trail

The man who designed this house loved wood. The exterior is cedar shingles. Powerful redwood beams project from the sides. Wide eaves extend on all sides, and even the drains are wood.

The main level of this three level house is one floor below the street. One passes under a redwood arbor and steps down 2 zig-zag flights of steps to a broad deck and the front door. Inside is a vast area of Mexican tile which leads through a short hall to the huge living and dining rooms. Natural redwood framed widows (all the windows are positive action casements) span the front and open to a spacious deck that crosses the entire house. From this vantage point you look across rooftops below you to a vista that includes Pt. Lobos and a large part of Carmel Bay.

The living room is an open plan with cathedral ceiling supported by redwood beams, a great fireplace on the south, a skylight and track lighting.

The kitchen, all hand made redwood cabinets, is opposite the dining area. It's large, 18x11.5, and completely equipped. There's a half-bath near the entrance.

4 bedrooms and 4 baths branch off this center in several directions and on 3 levels. The master suite adjoins the living room on the same level and also shares the view of the sea. It's a bit more than 15 feet square and has an enormous bath with two sinks, a giant tub and glassed in shower. A fireplace is located on the north wall, and a door opens out to the wide deck.

There are 2 more large bedrooms and baths on the lower level, both carpeted, both with spacious baths, each equipped with a private deck. The 4th bedroom (and its own bath) is on the top level. A set of sliding doors opens from it to a birds' eye view of the living and dining rooms. The garage is also on this upper level.

The house is brand new, 3400 sq. ft., a modern design throughout, blending the colors of redwood, oak, Mexican tile and white plaster walls. It has an open, airy feeling, and in its location at 24722 Upper Trail gives you a grand sense of being "above it all." The price is $510,000.

CARMEL BY BILL BATES

CARMEL LEGENDS

No. 17

Since the days of Boccaccio, religious and sex have been — well, ah, bedfellows. Carmel has had little to do with the recent spate of teevangelists' adventures, but we were in the thick of a similar event back in 1926. None of the Tales of the Decameron could match the amazing story of AIMEE SEMPLE MCPHERSON, the preeminent evangelist of her time, a healer of the sick, a powerful radio preacher and a consummate actress. She disappeared into the Pacific off Ocean Beach on May 16, 1926 and set in motion a hysterical tale. About 6 weeks later, on June 23, she reappeared in Douglas, Arizona, staggering in from the dessert with a fantastic story of kidnapping. Later it was established that much of her time has been spent in the Benedict Cottage on Scenic Drive in Carmel in a romantic interlude with Kenneth Ormiston, manager of her radio station. If Carmel needed any reinforcement for its romantic reputation, this was it. You can still get an arguement about the details.
